Dear Moris,

I am sorry for the confusion. You should have uploaded your revised manuscript in the same submission (with the same number), not create a new one like you did. Have you already published it? Because if you can withdraw from the other journal and submit the revised manuscript back to me via email, we will publish it in December issue. Thanks

Introduction

Introduction is ok but problem statement isn't there. It provided a research context though.

Literature Review:

There are no literature reviews in this article. There are various research discussed about this topic. See Ida, R. (2010). She is widely cited. Also see Sudibyoy & Patria (2013), Armando (2014).

Methodology:

Creswell's convergent parallel mixed method is not applied in such way. It is not sufficient just to have descriptive analysis to present a quantitative study. Please refer this article titled Population-based health promotion perspective for older driver safety (Classen et al, 2007) to understand how convergent parallel mixed method is applied.

Findings & Interpretations:

The findings is weird in a way because the survey questionnaire is not analysed with statistical analysis. The instruments of the survey is questionable. The interviews generated rich findings but without problem statement, the result seems confusing?

Discussion:

It must reflect the findings using convergent parallel mixed which is not the case with the article.

References/ Bibliography (APA system):

Confusing APA. Example, Janus (1984) is not cited properly.

Title, Abstracts & Keywords (articles written in Bahasa Melayu must also include abstract & keywords written in English):

Not reflected in the article though.

Maybe just focus on the in depth interviews? Provided with proper problem statement and literature reviews.
