REVIEWER 1

Strengths of the Article

The article asserts the importance of marketers who use celebrities to influence consumer-purchasing decisions with the aim to increase sales and expand their product market share. This study intends to measure the influence of consumer demographic factors on their attitude towards celebrities as products endorsers. The research topics and hypotheses, which address celebrity's expertise in a field related to a particular product can help create a relationship or association. Celebrities' choice, media used, marketing strategies, and the relative representation of popular figures, are clearly stated in the article. It is reasonable to analyze the effect of celebrities endorsing using the celebrity influencing model. The quantitative analysis is made more rigorous by the statistics used

Identified Weaknesses

Language and Writing Errors:

- Typos and grammatical errors, e.g., "countris" instead of "countries" in the abstract, and inconsistent tenses throughout the text.
- Overly lengthy sentences reduce clarity in some sections.
- Incorrect phrasing, such as "the selection of celebrity endorsers is very dependent on product segmentation, targeting and positioning in certain markets and for this reason, consumer demographic profiles are important in marketing." could be more concisely rephrased.

Lack of Theoretical Depth:

- While the celebrities' influence model is applied, the article does not critically engage with or expand upon the theory. The discussion could benefit from linking findings more deeply to theoretical implications.

Over-reliance on Previous Studies:

- The introduction and literature review heavily cite prior work without clearly delineating how this study advances the field beyond filling a geographical gap.

Sample Size Justification:

- The justification for using 464 respondents, while practical, lacks detailed reasoning, given Indonesia's size and media diversity. The difference influence between traditional media and new media is not clearly defined. The word "media" is used repeatedly but I could not find any operationalization of it.

Limited Insights into New Media:

- The article highlights that media dominate celebrities endorers in their commercials but fails to explore how this dominance affects public opinion or policy-making in advertising products in Indonesian media.

Superficial Policy Discussion:

- The comparison with studies in other countries is underdeveloped. The article misses an opportunity to discuss how advertisers could influence or reflect policy the buying action among Indonesian consumers.

Presentation of Data:

- Tables lack clarity in formatting and labels. For instance, Table 1 ("Respondents' demographics ") does not clearly indicate the significance of its findings.
- Interpretation of Chi-Square results could be simplified for accessibility.

Suggestions for Improvement

Enhance Writing Quality:

- Proofread the article thoroughly to correct grammatical errors and typos.
- Use concise, clear sentences, especially in technical sections like methodology and results.

Strengthen Theoretical Engagement:

- Elaborate on how findings contribute to the theory used, particularly in the context of celebrity's endorers use by advertisers in developing countries.
- Discuss implications for media studies in the digital age.

Expand the Sample:

- Consider justifying the population and sample size more convincingly.
- Include a broader range of media sources to capture diversity within various media.

Integrate Policy Analysis:

- Explore how celebrities' endorers could influence consumers acceptance and policymaking for consumers protection in Indonesia.
- Expand the discussion on the lack of a consumers protection law and its implications.

Deepen Analysis of Media Use:

- Examine the role of social media and user-generated content in marketing and promoting products.
- Investigate whether these celebrities use in advertising foster misinformation or promote awareness.

Improve Data Presentation:

- Revise tables to ensure clarity, and include clear captions and context for the data presented.
- Summarize Chi-Square results in simpler terms to emphasize key findings.

Discuss Broader Implications:

- Link findings to global promoting and advertising trends of using celebrities' endorsers to influence consumers.
- Address how Indonesian unique consumers characteristics could serve as a model for other countries with similar demographic profiles.

Reviewer 2

The language level in the article needs improvement, as there are several misspellings (for example contris in the abstract) and limited vocabulary.

1. The arguments in the introduction are thorough; however, I suggest improving the transitions between paragraphs to ensure better flow. Additionally, the authors should clearly highlight the significance of the study. Why is this research important? This justification is currently missing.
2. The review is comprehensive, but the authors overly rely on Spears and Singh (2004). It would be beneficial to compare their findings with other scholars conducting similar research on the influence of celebrity's endorser.
3. The authors need to justify their choice of using The celebrities' influence model over other approaches proposed by other scholars. Furthermore, the decision to use cross-tab analysis and Chi-square test requires explanation.
4. In the discussion section, the authors should delve deeper into explaining the "why" behind the results. While this is addressed, it is not sufficiently apparent and needs greater emphasis.
5. A strong conclusion should highlight the significance of the findings and demonstrate how the results contribute to the field or address the research gap. This is currently lacking and should be included in a concise manner, perhaps in three sentences.
